<td>A nationwide landmine survey was undertaken from September 2008 to August 2009 in 7 of Zambia’s 9 provinces which were suspected to contain mines. The survey identified 35 SHAs in 25 wards with 12 of these areas being roads used by freedom fighters and 21 former military camps, military positions or battle areas. Of the 35 SHAs, all 12 road segments were released. During the survey 13 spot tasks were conducted, destroying 2 submunitions, 21 items of AXO/UXO and 2 other explosive devices. The survey methodology utilized teams of multi-skilled surveyors and included techniques such as primary opinion collection, non-technical survey, false negative sampling and false positive sampling. The survey determined that there were no minefields or mined areas. Zambia declared itself a mine free country in accordance with Article 5 of the Convention on 13 November 2009.</td>
