OrganicNews - How women can contribute more to the US economy - McKinsey Quarterly - Organization - Talent

"Women are crucial to US economic growth. Indeed, since women’s participation in the workforce took off in the 1970s, their productivity has accounted for about a quarter of current GDP. But women still aren’t reaching their full economic potential. One important reason is that far too many highly skilled women simply don’t progress up the ladder in corporate America."

OrganicNews - Organic marketing developing in Lithuania

"In a detailed report, the charitable organization Ekoconnect provides information about the development of organic agriculture in Lithuania. In December 2005, the first wholefood shop in the Baltic state was opened in Kaunas. In the meantime, more specialist stores have begun operating in both Kaunas and Vilnius, and the proportion of organic products in these wholefood shops is about 25%."

OrganicNews - New study of French natural cosmetics market

"In a new study, the British market research organization Organic Monitor estimates that the French market for natural and organic cosmetics achieved sales of around €450m in 2012. This puts France in second place after Germany, with sales of €680m. Between 2002 and 2007 the market grew each year by over 30%."
